TATELEUT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The town of Leesburg was established in 1758 by an Act of the General Assembly of Virginia authorizing Nicholas Minor to sell lots from a sixty acre tract surrounding his tavern. The town was to serve as the county seat for the newly formed Loudoun County. A committee of three men had been appointed a year earlier to lay out "proper streets" and their report, which still exists, forms the basis for the present layout of the community. The settlement had been known as Georgetown in honor of King George II until the county was formed in 1758, and the name was changed to Leesburg in honor of Francis Lightfoot Lee.

The town grew significantly during its first several decades, but expansion slowed considerably from the War Between the States to the post-World War II era. As a result, Leesburg possesses an important collection of structures dating from the late-eighteenth century through the early-nineteenth century, most of which are well maintained. Especially notable structures include the following: The Laurel Brigade Inn, an early stone tavern still in operation; Osburn's Tavern, scene of a reception for Lafayette during his visit in 1825; the "Old Tavern," an architecturally distinguished structure built in the late-eighteenth century; and the County Office Building, a dignified Greek Revival building erected circa 1844 as the Leesburg Academy. The brick Classic Revival Loudoun County Court House was completed in 1895 on the site of two previous court houses. Also located in the town is the significant site of the Old Stone Church, demolished in 1900. The lot, which was purchased by the Methodists on May 11, 1766, was the first property owned by the Methodists in America.

The numerous early dwellings and commercial buildings, along with the structures cited, combine to make Leesburg one of the best preserved and most picturesque communities in Virginia. Fortunately the historic integrit and scenic quality of the town have received protection through historic zoning established in recent years.
